Amazing Green Tea

Amazing Chai Tea

English Breakfast

This is the most popular of all blended teas.

Earl Grey

When the British Prime Minister, the 2nd Earl Grey, visited China in 1830 he was treated to a cup of tea, flavoured with oil from the peel of bergamot, a canton orange.

Darjeeling

Whilst the processing, maturity and form of the leaf give tea its taste, the Himalayans bestow the character. Long sunny days, rainy nights and a cool mountain breeze give Darjeeling its light, delicate taste.

Assam

It is India's least populated region, with monsoons raging from June to September. Yet in this vast, inhospitable, natural greenhouse some of the world's finest teas flourish.

Rooibos

A natural de-cafeinated tea from the northern cape of South Africa. It has enjoyed a dramatic rise in popularity due to its healthy attributes.

Green Sencha

It comes from the early tea bushes, which start sprouting in late April. These young leaves, subjected to very hot steam, generate its unique taste.
